Sascha Glasl, Founding Partner, Space and Matter, Netherlands

I am an architect, based in Amsterdam. I graduated in 2007 cum laude from the RWTH Aachen, where I now work as assistant professor at the department of typologies and design. In 2009 I co-founded space&matter together with Tjeerd Haccou and Martijn Pool. Space&matter is an office for architecture, urban planning and concept development.

Rather than just being reactive, we like to initiate projects at space&matter and proactively involve ourselves in matters that we consider as interesting and relevant. This level of independence enables us to develop innovative processes and methodologies. Setting up knowledge and entrepreneurial networks around our own interests and fascinations has proven to be an effective way to realize our ambitions.

Lately we initiated and realized a project "De Ceuvel", where we transformed Post-Industrial Land and Discarded Houseboats into a Creative Eco-Hub
